

The Healthcare Landscape – Part Two

The video below is the second installment in our series sharing highlights from the Business North Carolina 2017 Healthcare Round Table event that we hosted in our Greensboro office last month. The full discussion is featured in the May issue of Business North Carolina Magazine.

In this video, Sean Willoughby-Ray, Benefits Practice Lead/Vice President, discusses how health is a competitive advantage – for individuals and businesses.

At Scott, we help our clients discover how they can lead their employees in improving their health, ultimately creating a significant competitive advantage. We understand that employers today need more than a cookie-cutter wellness program to make a real difference in their culture. We use the power of real data to help our clients impact their employee population's health risk profile, which in turn increases health plan performance and delivers a more productive workforce.

Contact a Scott Benefits Consultant today to learn more about our unique, data-driven approach to health risk management.